

Unbeknown to many Virginian's, the presence of large round bales, new cross fences for improved rotational grazing, beef cows grazing "stockpiled" fescue during the winter, brown fields in spring killed with herbicides in preparation for soil-saving no-till corn, and pastures and hay fields seeded with soil-protecting no-till methods are a constant reminder of Harlan's leadership and dedicated service to the agricultural producers of the Commonwealth.

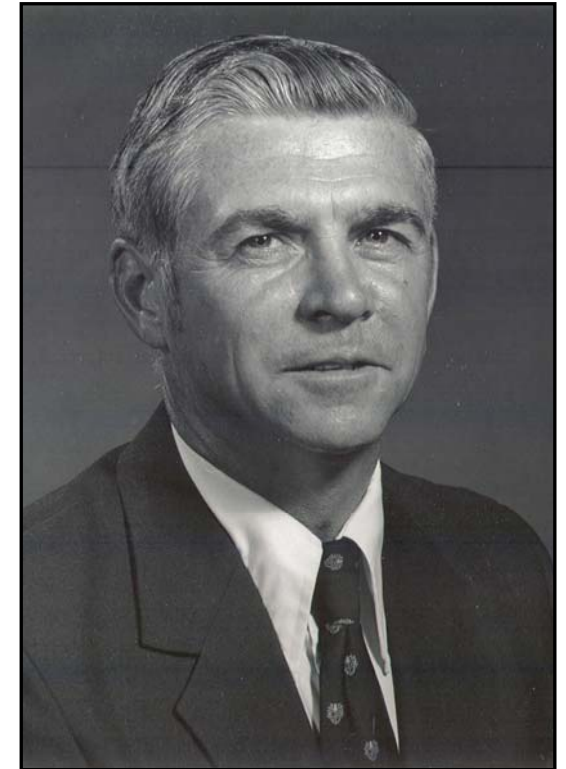

Harlan loved the outdoors, hunting, fishing, gardening, and Virginia Tech Sports. He especially enjoyed raising and training beagles for hunting and field trialing. Harlan and Jean, his wife, very seldom missed a Virginia Tech football or basketball game having been season ticket holders since 1967.

Dr. Harlan E. White Memorial Scholarship Fund

“In remembrance of a wonderful human being that dedicated his life to Virginia’s forage industry”

Virginia Forage and Grassland Council

Honoring Dr. White's Years of Service

The Virginia Forage and Grassland Council seeks your assistance in honoring the life of Dr. Harlan E. White. The Dr. Harlan E. White Memorial Scholarship Fund will be used for scholarships, education, research and other activities related to the promotion and better understanding of the forage industry.

Dr. White dedicated his life to Virginia's forage industry. It is now time for us, the recipients of these good works, to dedicate ourselves and share some of the great gifts that Harlan bestowed upon us.

Dr. White's career was long and distinguished. He joined the Virginia Tech Agronomy Department in 1966 as an Extension Forage Specialist. In 1979, he was the driving force behind the formation of the Virginia Forage and Grassland Council which has grown to become a major voice for the forage and livestock industries in Virginia.

Harlan was a recipient of many state and national awards recognizing his educational programs directed at improving the well being of forage producers and their support industries. His work was always a cooperative effort partnering with individuals interested in improving forage production and utilization. His dedication to service and education was recognized by the Virginia Forage and Grassland Council (VFGC) when he was awarded the Medallion Award. His dedication to the forage industry continued through out his retirement years by serving as both treasurer and advisor to the VFGC.

The Virginia Forage and Grassland Council is accepting funds from corporate and individual donors that wish to honor Dr. White. The goal is to establish a permanent endowment to provide scholarships to support Virginia forage education and research. VFGC has an ambitious plan to raise $25,000 by 2013, and $500,000 by 2015. The fund will be managed and administered by the Virginia Forage and Grassland Council Board of Directors. All funds will be audited on an annual basis and shall be dedicated to the sole purpose of the Scholarship Fund.

We are asking for your financial support in this endeavor and welcome all donations in any amount. The following categories will be recognized.

Platinum Medallion, $10,000 or more;
Gold Medallion, $1,000 - 10,000;
Silver Medallion, $500 - $1000;
Bronze Medallion, $100 - $500;
and Friends of the Fund, under $100.

Keep in mind that all gifts to the Dr. Harlan E. White Memorial Scholarship Fund are tax deductible.
